PREFACE.

---

THE noblest work of the pen, as of the tongue, is to set forth and vindicate the gospel of Divine Love. One method may succeed where another method fails. The eye may be found open when the ear is closed, and that attention secured in the closet which is denied in the temple.

The author has endeavored to present, through the vivid medium of verse, the history of a soul with Christ, in the form of a personal narrative, embodying, it may be, in one the experience of many. He would that these lines were more worthy of the sublime truths considered; yet, such as they are, he sends them forth with the hope that they may contribute something to the great work of preaching Jesus Christ. May some soul be helped, some life stimulated, some praise won to the Lord of glory.

DORCHESTER,
September, 1872.

CONTENTS.

---

PART I.

THE DIGNITY OF THE SOUL . . . . . 1-14

Invocation. The greatness of the human soul. In the image of God, and peer of the Angels. Above all material nature. Every soul honored in the achievements of the greatest. Sovereign, and difficult to rule. Not therefore God, nor part of God. Like God, personal and free. Ability of holiness or sin. Immortal. Eternal bliss, or misery.

PART II.

CONSCIOUSNESS OF GUILT . . . . . 15-38

The Soul in ruins. Depth of the fall measured by the height of privilege and ability. Perfection of obedience demanded. Selfishness the law of the sinful life. Secret sins. Ambition the god; Mammon; Pleasure. Perversion of the truth. Unbelief and contempt of God. The willing slave of sin. Conscience awake. God angry. Eternal death deserved. It is right, and God holy in justice. No hope in selfish prayer, nor in sceptical denial. The terrors of remorse. Not quenched in worldly pleasures. Better an eternity of few stripes than of many. Good deeds may be sins, and cannot make amends. Social festivity not heavenly cheer. Knowledge unavailing. The saintly messenger offers vain comfort. A wrestle with the Tempter. Better to live and do good, though we finally perish.

PART III.

REDEMPTION . . . . . 39-57

A view of Jesus in glory. He seems to address the Father, and give a reason why the elect soul is left in darkness, sin, and sorrow; claims it as his own; and sends the Spirit to renew in holiness. Sudden dawn of light. The glorious plan of salvation by Christ clearly seen. The great thought in prophecy and symbol. The advent of the Messiah. Life and works. Sufferings and death. Resurrection and ascension. Faith accepts the Cross, and rests there alone. The glad effect.

PART IV.

THE HOLY GRACES . . . . . 58-94

Glory of Solomon's Temple. The spiritual temple more glorious. Graces of the Spirit. Love. Joy. Peace. Patience. Gentleness. Goodness. Fidelity. Meekness. Temperance. Humility.

PART V.

THE WORK OF LOVE . . . . . 95-168

Faithfulness enjoined. The voice of Duty. Christ the pattern and teacher. Earnest preparation.

Prayer. Study of all truth. Knowledge of man and nature; but more, of the Scriptures and God. The Law and justice. Divine Love and the Cross, the greatest argument and plea. The truth in the heart and from the heart. Charity. The character and the life. Illustrate Christ. Example mightier than words. Prayer for help and guidance. Every field to be entered. The happy Home. Society entered and elevated. Education encouraged. Impartial justice and honesty. The kingly power of Love. The Church the special object of labor and regard. Her blessing the blessing of the world. All things administered in the interests of the kingdom of Christ. The most effective service in the service of the Church. Enlargement by sanctification, and by new souls won. Native land. Great preparations of Providence. The Pilgrims. God's wonderful care. The revolutionary days. Marvellous progress in peace. Slavery, and its dreadful fruit. The war of the Rebellion. The glorious issue. The Divine hand. The promise of the future. Destiny of peace, mercy, and liberty. A blessing to all the nations. Plans of good in the measure of the country's greatness. The noble heart the best nobility. Discipline a kingly race, worthy of self-government. The Common School. The Scriptures universal. A healthy Literature. Wealth wisely used. Every good cause promoted. The Home Missionary. The Sabbath. Virtue in high places. The righteous ballot. Dangers of political corruption. All lands to be loved and blessed. The human race brethren. Individual influence. The awful state of un-Christian nations. Earth,
