LAZY LETTERS FROM LOW LATITUDES

I.

FROM A CUPOLA.

HAWAIIAN HOTEL, HONOLULU, H. I.

DO you remember, dear C—, the day when you and I sat alone in this glass house and heaved a stone at civilization, business, worry, and the world in general? We heaved it fearlessly, for we were above the tree-tops and out of reach; even had our victims deigned to retaliate we might have still shouted defiance, for were we not prepared to withstand a siege in the cupola with ample rations of champagne and cigarettes?

You had dropped in upon us, as is your
