DEDICATION.

To Her, from whose loving lips in the dawn of childhood, I first learned the beauty, power and sweetness of the English tongue; and who, as my mind expanded and thirst for knowledge grew, taught me, in matchless eloquence of love, all that makes the soul right and the heart strong, My MOTHER, in loving gratitude this book is dedicated

BY THE AUTHOR.

It is always sweet to make such sincere tributes to a mother.

NOTE TO THE PREFACE.

During the preparation of this book for publication, the author contributed a short article on the subject of "Christ as an Orator" to the North American Review. The article was very favorably received, and many readers, including ministers and educators, voluntarily addressed the author, care of the Review and personally, writing in high praise of the subject and of its excellent treatment, and expressing an earnest desire that the author would furnish the public with a more extended elucidation of this most important subject in book form. The author therefore gladly avails himself of the present opportunity of returning thanks for their favorable criticism, and it gives him much pleasure to comply with their desire for a more extended treatment. The present volume was in preparation before the essay mentioned above was written, and embraces all the topics so concisely stated in the article, with many others of still greater importance.
