FOREWORD

THERE has been no little talk of Indiana authors, yet the popular discussion and the common knowledge of them are limited to about a dozen names; and most of the others are comparatively unknown. It is quite common to hear some one ask with surprise, "Was Joaquin Miller a native of Indiana?", "Is William T. Hornaday a Hoosier?", "Was William Vaughn Moody from your State?", "Is Sarah Killikelly an Indianian?", "Can you claim Annie Fellows Johnston?" and similar questions. In this centennial year we have thought it worth while to present some of our Indiana literature to the public through the medium of a quotation from a different Indiana writer or speaker for each day in the year, and we submit the result with confidence that the extracts given will not be found unworthy the State's reputation.

CATHERINE T. DUNN.

JANUARY FIRST

AGAIN I hail the blessed morn
That brings to all another year ;
A smile for some, for some a tear,
But hope for all, to-day is born.

JONATHAN W. GORDON.

JANUARY SECOND

IT DOES not matter what work man does, how humble his vocation, if he does it well ; if he has the true craftsman's love for excellent handiwork ; and his delight in driving nails or digging his ditch straight and square, or tying a package neatly.

The farthest star in the immensity of space and the meanest weed in the fields are working together to some mighty purpose which is beyond the mind of man to grasp.

WILBUR D. NESBIT.

JANUARY THIRD

It WOULDN'T be possible not to be kind
In the Land of Beginning Again ;
And the ones we misjudged and the ones whom we grudged
Their moments of victory here
Would find in the grasp of our loving handclasp
More than penitent lips could explain.

For what had been hardest we'd know had been best
And what had seemed loss would be gain ;
For there isn't a sting that will not take wing
When we've faced it and laughed it away ;
And I think that the laughter is most what we're after
In the Land of Beginning Again.

LOUISE FLETCHER CONNELLY.

JANUARY FOURTH

God made me.—
I question not the Builder,—
Believing still that his ways are wise.
This is the one sweet duty that I claim ;
To keep the palace chambers cool and pure,
And lily-chaste within, while they endure ;
And all the many turret lights aflame ;
To pour love's wine, and bid the world take part,
Around the purple altars of my heart.

DR. JAMES NEWTON MATTHEWS.

JANUARY FIFTH

I (OPPORTUNITY) stand outside the padlocked gate
Of those who are prone to hesitate.
I stand, and patient wait until at last I see
They're unprepared to welcome me.

PETER M. DILL.

JANUARY SIXTH

LET us be ready, be expectant, be enthusiastic, be faithful, be on good terms honestly with ourselves and all those about us, and, above all, let us be cheerful.

MARY EILEEN AHERN.

JANUARY SEVENTH

ALL spirits arise out of one spirit, and are related to each other, as children of one father are alike by virtue of common spiritual origin.

There is one reason, and in that reason all persons are united.

CHARLES RICHMOND HENDERSON.

JANUARY EIGHTH

THE Know Thyself written over the Delphic portal may have meant, with characteristic obscurity, Study others, and in this way learn to know thyself.

KATE MILNER RABB.
