

THE STRUGGLE FOR NATIONAL EDUCATION

Published @ 2017 Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd

ISBN 9780649714759

The Struggle for National Education by John Morley

Except for use in any review, the reproduction or utilisation of this work in whole or in part in any form by any electronic, mechanical or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including xerography, photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, is forbidden without the permission of the publisher, Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd, PO Box 1576 Collingwood, Victoria 3066 Australia.

All rights reserved.

Edited by Trieste Publishing Pty Ltd.
Cover @ 2017

This book is sold subject to the condition that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, re-sold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without a similar condition including this condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

www.triestepublishing.com

JOHN MORLEY

THE STRUGGLE FOR NATIONAL EDUCATION

2

2.10.90

THE STRUGGLE FOR NATIONAL EDUCATION.

BY JOHN MORLEY.

LONDON:
CHAPMAN AND HALL, 193, PICCADILLY.
1873.

LONDON:
PRINTED BY VIZARD AND CO.,
CITY ROAD.

Harcourt & Co.

NOTE.

ABOUT three-fourths of the following pages have already appeared in the Fortnightly Review. This portion has been carefully revised.

The remaining part—beginning with Section XIV., page 133—in which the writer discusses the expediency of making the elementary schools free, has not been printed before.

In an Appendix the reader will find extracts from the Elementary Education Act of 1870, as well as from the regulations of the Education Department. This may help to make the features of the existing system clearer to those who are not already familiar with it. Finally, as a means of financial comparison, the education budget of the city of Chicago has been placed at the end of the volume.

October 25, 1873.

CONTENTS.

I.		PAGE
Inadequate view of the Education Question usually taken	1	1
Church and dissent	2	2
Which of the two has the better political antecedents	3	3
Political superiority of the dissenters in history	7	7
II.
The Twenty Fifth Clause, the key to a position	8	8
Public expectations in 1870	11	11
Their disappointment	12	12
Consequences to the Liberal party	15	15
The Education Act a perpetuation of the old system	17	17
The half year of grace and increase of the parliamentary grants	17	17
III.
The policy of administering the education fund through the sects	18	18
Badness of instruction in sectarian schools	19	19
Actual results	20	20
Inspectors' accounts of bad instruction	21	21
Our results contrasted with those of Prussia	25	25
Futility of mere increase in number of scholars	26	26
Scotland and the United States	28	28
Discouragement in later attempts to learn practical arts	29	29
Instruction bad, first, because the objects of the schools are sectarian	32	32
Sectarian aims of school managers illustrated	33	33
IV.
Second reason for bad instruction—bad teachers	34	34
Inspectors' accounts of the training schools	35	35
Bad secular teaching in the training schools, the result of sectarian aims	37	37
The unfavourable social position of the teacher	39	39
Objection that the Prussian schools are religious, considered	41	41
Want of funds—one reason of inefficiency of sectarian schools	43	43

	PAGE
V.
Advantages of local self-government	43
Education Act rejects these in the country	45
And lessens them in towns	46
Violation of organic principles in entrusting public money to irresponsible bodies	47
VI.
Likeness between our struggle and that against ultramontaniam in Germany	48
Policy of the Education Act gives new life to Anglican supremacy	49
Illustration of insincerity in the clerical party	50
Re-endowment of the Church of England	51
Examples of voluntary schools, so called	52
Does the state pay for sectarian instruction ?	53
Sophistical pretence of equality of chance between the Church and the other bodies	56
VII.
Indirect influences of increasing the power of the clergy	59
The clergy hostile to scientific inquiry	60
Allegation that dissenting ministers are equally hostile, examined	61
Tendency towards 'strong opinions' and ecclesiastical excesses	62
The clergy represent a resolute corporate spirit	64
And retrogressive forces	65
Objection that the laity cannot be trusted to provide instruction, examined	66
The clergy and the poor	68
Impolicy of divorcing machinery from force	71
VIII.
The religious difficulty	72
Plea for parental conscience urged by the enemies of a Conscience Clause	73
The parent has no right to make others pay for his religion	74
Plea that dissenters can have religious instruction paid for by public money, examined	75
Plea that the majority of the ratepayers desire religious instruction, examined	76
Plea that the state only pays for secular instruction, examined	78
True limit and intention of state interference	79
Shown by the Conscience Clause	80
Grounds for distrust in the efficacy of the Conscience Clause	82
Attendance on instruction a purely secular duty	86
Parental 'choice' of denominational schools, illustrated	87
A solution of the religious difficulty	89

CONTENTS.

vii

IX.

	PAGE
Objection that religious instruction will suffer	91
Gross failure of religious instruction	92
Indifference of dissenters to the religious instruction in Church schools .	94
Inconsistency of making instruction the social panacea, and then leaving instruction unimproved	95

X.

Summary of preceding arguments	96
The true Education Question	98
Effects of the cessation of religious inspection	100
The Act has not improved the position of the teacher	102
Nor enforced attendance	103
Nor extended the limits of school age	103

XI.

Rude vigour not a substitute for improved and more widely spread instruction	104
Measures taken in Australia	106
Danger of the possessors of political power remaining ignorant	107
Danger of further extending the rural franchise without improving rural education	110

XII.

No desire to exaggerate the value of instruction	113
Its use to be expressed in homely terms	113
For instance, it would protect the labourer against the shopkeeper	114
And enable him to share the management of his club	115
English and Scotch peasants compared	116
True significance of instruction	117
Its effect on character	118
Indirect as well as direct	120

XIII.

Voluntary system examined	121
Amount of voluntary subscriptions	123
The device called a voluntary rate	124
True nature of the subscriptions	124
Alleged unwillingness of farmers to pay for education	126
Alleged danger of discouraging the so-called voluntaryists	127
Carelessness of voluntary managers as to public money	128
What we gain by School-boards	131
Compulsion not the only gain	132