To meet a growing inquiry for the author's Poetical Works, the publisher made arrangements with him for the issue of a complete Edition, with his own final alterations or corrections. Most of the Dialect Poems have been long out of print, although several Editions have been issued of some at different times. Several of the other Poems possess great merit, but are little known. All that the author cares to preserve are now brought together from every known source for the first time, and have had the full benefit of his own revision, and it is hoped the volume will meet with a generous reception from the reading public. The Portrait is an excellent likeness from a photograph taken expressly for this edition, a few weeks ago, by Mr. E. J. Passingham, of Bradford.
