We live in succession, in division, in parts, in particles. Meantime within man is the soul of the whole; the wise silence; the universal beauty, to which every part and particle is equally related; the eternal ONE. And this deep power in which we exist, and whose beatitude is all accessible to us, is not only self-sufficing and perfect in every hour, but the act of seeing and the thing seen, the seer and the spectacle, the subject and the object, are one. We see the world piece by piece, as the sun, the moon, the animal, the tree; but the whole, of which these are the shining parts, is the soul. Only by the vision of that wisdom can the horoscope of the ages be read, and by falling back on our better thoughts, by yielding to the spirit of prophecy which is innate in every man, we can know what it saith.

Emerson.

Here Nature shall condense her powers,
Her music, and her meteors,
And lifting man to the blue deep
Where stars their perfect courses keep,
Like wise perceptor, lure his eye
To sound the science of the sky,
And carry learning to its height
Of untried power and sane delight.

Emerson.

As noted in Vol. II of this series, it has been our endeavor to give a lucid interpretation of planetary influences, the most important and far reaching of all the sciences. In a work of such vast magnitude it would be impossible to avoid bringing into use language and thoughts similar to that which has been used by other writers in the past. Our object has been and is to eliminate error, presenting only the truth by placing before the world a complete digest, of which Volumes I, II and III form a most important and interesting introductory part, necessary for the full understanding of the subjects to follow, to wit: Astro-physiology, which relates to the effect of the planetary rays upon the physical, and also the mental part of the individual; the nature, location and influence of the fixed stars upon human life, also the Esoteric side of this science and a complete analysis of Hindoo Astrology, together with much other knowledge, to be found in future volumes. The conviction that the data found in these writings will assist the investigator in acquiring a greater insight into the laws of Nature, is ample recompense for our efforts in seeking a scientific solution of the many problems which enter into human existence.
