THE writer once more submits to his many friends a volume, consisting mainly of lyrical verse.

The poem "From an American Sermon" is a transcript from the last sermon preached in London by the late Bishop Phillips Brooks, of Massachusetts. That "From an English Sermon" is from a fine volume by his countryman, the late Thomas Jones, published, with a preface, by his admirer, Mr. Browning, under the title of "The Divine Order." "The Hymn of Kleantes" is a translation from the poem quoted by St. Paul at Athens. "Homer Blind" is based on a fragment of Aristotle.
