PREFACE.

THESE lectures were delivered at the request of the Council of Legal Education, and as some (I fear too partial) friends, who were good enough to attend, expressed their approbation, I have ventured to print them.

This little work, of course, makes no pretence to the position of a text book; but it is hoped that law students and commercial men may find in it a readable, concise, and accurate view of the main principles of the law of partnerships.

For the convenience of those readers who desire to go deeper into the subject, a number of authorities have been referred to in the footnotes.

Need I make acknowledgment of my indebtedness to the Master of the Rolls, Sir NATHANIEL LINDLEY? It goes without saying. No one who ventures to express any opinion on partnership law can be otherwise than grateful for his monumental work. Also, I wish to say how much assistance I have derived from Sir FREDERICK POLLOCK's book on the subject, and from the very able and concise article of Mr. W. B. LINDLEY in that excellent compendium, the Encyclopædia of English Law.
