INTRODUCTION.

I HAVE been asked by Mr. Nye to write a few words of introduction to his excellent little work on the Authors of the Oxford Movement. This I can do with great satisfaction, as I have had nearly a life-long knowledge of some of them, and have read over the whole of what Mr. Nye has written in proof. I can truly say that a more fair and equitable treatment of the subject I could not wish for.

It was my happiness to receive my title for Holy Orders more than half a century since from the Rev. Thomas Keble, Vicar of Bisley, one of the writers of "Tracts for the Times," and I could use no words too strong to express
