“ Oh may these scatter'd rays of hope impart
Some gleams of comfort to thy drooping heart ;
Lighten its sorrows, and console its fears,
In thy sad passage through this vale of tears ! ”

PREFACE.

DEAR SUFFERER,

Are you so worn out with pain and weakness—and so weary in mind, as to feel unequal even to the exertion of reading excepting for a few short minutes at a time—and yet are longing for “ spiritual food ” and words of sympathy to cheer and refresh you, that you “ faint not by the way ? ”

One who has felt this “ heaviness ” “ for a season,” has found her greatest solace, as soon as some hours of more ease are mercifully granted, in selecting these “ WORDS OF COMFORT,” and with the heartfelt hope that they will afford the same support to your drooping spirit,—they are now offered to you.
