PREFACE.

---

THE Editors believe that the Act with which they have dealt in the following pages is one of great and growing importance. They have endeavoured, so far as was possible with a scarcity of judicial decisions thereon, to make clear the somewhat intricate provisions of the Act. With this object in view they have compiled an Introduction, upon which they have bestowed considerable care, in the hope that, while by no means a summary of the Act, it may serve as a trustworthy guide to its provisions. Every effort has been made to render the Index convenient and complete. The forms which the Home Office and the Local Government Board have respectively issued under the Act are given in an Appendix.

W. C. BERNARD.
H. MORGAN-BROWN.
