Give me the wings of faith to rise
    Within the veil, and see
The saints above, how great their joys,
    How bright their glories be.

Once they were mourning here below,
    And wet their couch with tears ;
They wrestled hard, as we do now,
    With sins, and doubts, and fears.

I ask them whence their victory came,
    They, with united breath,
Ascribe their conquest to the Lamb,
    Their triumph to His death.

They mark'd the footsteps that He trod
    (His zeal inspired their breast ;)
And, following their incarnate God,
    Possess the promised rest.

Our glorious Leader claims our praise
    For His own pattern given ;
While the long cloud of witnesses
    Shows the same path to heaven.

ISAAC WATTS.

PREFACE TO SECOND EDITION.

IT is with unfeigned pleasure that I have prepared another edition of "Bunhill Fields." I acknowledge with gratitude the kind reception accorded to the book, not only from the readers, but also from the Press, both secular and religious. Indeed I have been surprised at the appreciation which has been shown, although I am fully aware that the subject itself, rather than the work of the author, has called it forth. Not the least agreeable experience has been to note the gladness with which Sunday School scholars have received the book as a reward for attendance and conduct.

In this edition I have included a few extra accounts and illustrations, and only wish that it were possible to deal with other noble men and women, whose last earthly home is in Bunhill Fields.

I am happy to record the renewal of certain stones since I published my first edition. Three notable ones are those of the late Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's grandfather, some other ancestors, and that of the preacher-poet Joseph Swain. Several members of the Langston family remembering their honourable ancestors have placed a new headstone opposite the old massive one. Appropriately enough, the graves of the Chamberlains and the Langstons are close together between that of Abram Hume and the "Sunken Tomb." I have marked the positions on the chart and am also giving photographs; these show the names of Joseph Chamberlain and Ann Langston, whose descendants have made such a mark in the life of our mighty city and vast empire.

It is well to notice that the Southern section of the ground has been closed to the public during this period of war unless the services of one of the official guides be obtained; this part adjoins the Hon. Artillery Company's buildings.

If further interest is aroused in Bunhill Fields by this second edition, I shall be well repaid for any trouble I have had.

ALFRED W. LIGHT.
