INTRODUCTION.

THE compiler of this treatise has selected from the writings of Camden, Bede, O'Flaherty, Ware, Archdall, Stuart, Reeves, and the Annals of the Four Masters, such information relative to the City of Armagh, as he trusts will prove interesting to the general reader.

To those who have not access to works of greater pretensions, this brochure may be acceptable, as it contains, in a condensed form, a faithful and impartial description of every thing of importance, tending to throw light upon the past and present History of a City which was once the seat of learning for the British Isles.
