Mrs. Hathaway, who is always seeking human interest material for her pen, at one time secured a secretarial position with the government, in the Narcotic Division of the Prohibition Department. While in this position she heard the stories of many of the unfortunates, who were brought into the office to be questioned. "A Letter Home," "The Plaint of the Primrose Lady," "Little Red Riding Hood," "I Wish My Name Were Mary Instead of Magdalene," "The Profligate," "The Prodigal," "The Moth," etc., were written during this period. Mrs. Hathaway has included them in this collection of verse, for the sake of the lesson that they teach and the pity they inspire.
