RECOLLECTIONS AND REFLECTIONS OF AN ANGLER

FOR THE LAST FIFTY YEARS.

The magic wand then let us wield,
For aces that give and surly speed,
See crazy, weary, joyless old,
 W' wrangled face,
Come hither birch on o'er the field,
 W' creeps' pace

LONDON: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL, AND CO.

Like Junius, I dedicate this little Book to

The Public.

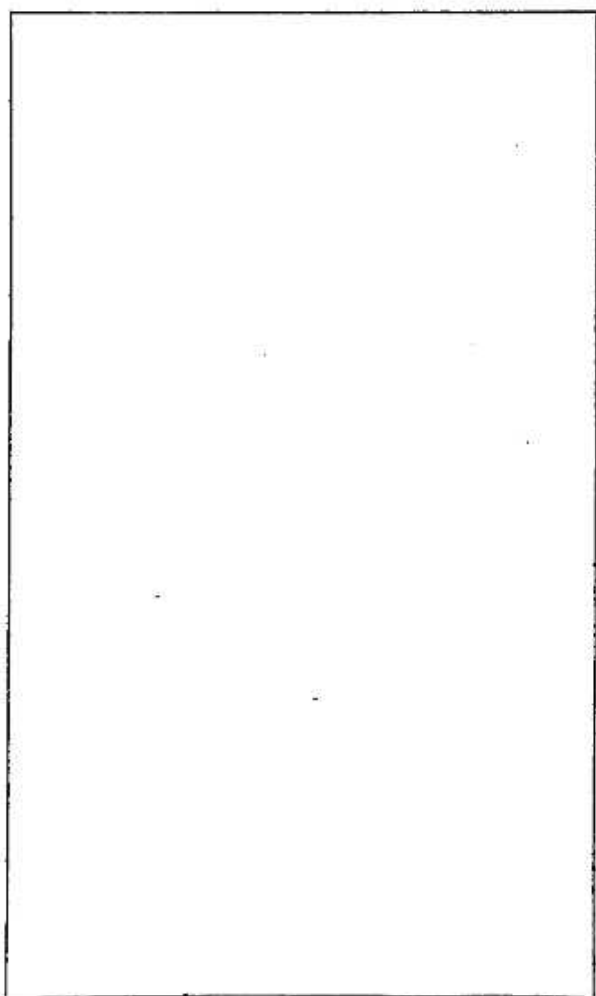

I did not think, when I wrote it for my Sons, 'away from the din and turmoil of London' (to be laid by for some future time), that I should so soon see it in print. This has been solely at the request of a friend who is not an angler. As I owe no man anything but love, I hope they will temper any observation they may perhaps make on it with the same virtue; and

I remain,

Their most obedient Servant,

JAMES LOCKE.
