PREFACE.

This paper is published at the request of Members of the Edinburgh Sutherland Association, before whom I had the pleasure of reading it on the 7th instant.

Although it may be unnecessary, I think it right to say that the Association is in no way committed to the views therein expressed.

THE

SUTHERLAND DEMOCRACY.

When glancing recently through the first Voters' Roll of the Sutherland Democracy, it occurred to me that it might be both interesting and profitable to collate a few facts relating to the representation of the County, and to classify the principal clan-names comprised in the electorate.

The extension of the parliamentary franchise to counties by the Act of 1884 was a measure of far-reaching political import to the country generally, but in its immediate effect on the Highland counties it was nothing short of an electoral revolution, and in no county was this more pronounced than in Sutherland.

To estimate aright this awakening to political power we must go back to 1872, when the Education Act put the management of the Schools into the hands of the people. That measure was an undoubted blessing to the more populous towns
