PREFACE.

SINCE the publication of the 2nd Edition of this work, the Islands of Montserrat, Grenada, Nevis and Dominica have adopted the Incumbered Estates Acts, which are now in force in all the principal West Indian Colonies which are subject to the Laws of England, except Barbadoes.

By an Act passed in the Session of 1872, the jurisdiction of the Court has been continued until Parliament shall otherwise determine.

Several cases of importance have been decided by the Commissioners since the publication of the 2nd Edition of this work, and some of them have been from time to time reported in the Solicitor's Journal. As, however, they are not easily accessible in that form, and a desire has been expressed by gentlemen practising in the Court to have them in a more convenient form, a few of the more important cases have been
