LECTURE I.

PAGE.

Consideration whether all Venereal Symptoms arise from one or from several Poisons—Question of no practical Importance, provided we know the several distinct Groupings of Symptoms.—Interference by Mercury prevents a just Knowledge of the natural Progress and History of Venereal Diseases—therefore, only under the anti-mercurial Treatment, this Knowledge could be acquired.—Relation in which Venereal stand to other Diseases.—Four distinct Forms of Venereal Diseases grounded on the Character of the Eruption.—Arguments in favour of Plurality of Venereal Poisons.—1st. From Difference in the Progress and Symptoms of each, and from the Character of the Eruption.—2nd. From Difference of Treatment required for each Form.—3rd. From Historical Evidence.—4th. From Experiments of Inoculation 1

LECTURE II.

A just Knowledge of the Natural History and Progress of Venereal Diseases, prevented by the general and indiscriminate Use of Mercury.—Hunter's Doctrine of the progressive Nature of Syphilis until stopped by Mercury occasioned great Errors in Practice.—Mercury often relinquished without relinquishing Hunter's Doctrine, through the Invention of specious Names.—Experiments of Inoculation by Bell, Evans, and Ricord support the Doctrine of a Plurality of Venereal Poisons. Two distinct Periods in Gonorrhœa and Primary Ulcers—the one of Infection, the other of Reparation.—Experiments with the Matter of Bubo, and with that of constitutional Ulcers considered	28

LECTURE III.

Pustular Venereal Disease described and contrasted with the Papular and Phagedenic.—Objections to a distinct Phagedenic Venereal Poison.—Dr. Ferguson's Opera Dancer.—Objections opposed by the direct Experiments of M. Ricord.—Treatment of primary Symptoms of Papular Venereal Disease—of Ulcers—of external Gonorrhœa—of Ulcers on the Frenum—of Ulcers complicated with Inflammation causing Phymosis, or extensive Suppuration, or Gangrene	53
--	----

LECTURE IV.

Gonorrhœa Virulenta—not confined to the specific Distance of Hunter.—Delpech's Opinions and Experience on this Point.—Two Stages of Gonorrhœa, one of Inflammation and of thin virulent Discharge, the other of Suppuration—each analogous to the Periods of Infection, and Reparation of Venereal Ulcers.—Treatment of second Stage.—Utility of Injections considered—that of a weak Solution of Nitrate of Silver most efficacious.—Consequences of Gonorrhœa are morbid Sensibility of the Membranous Portion of Urethra, with Gleet, Stricture, Sclerocele, Hernia Humoralis, Inflammation of the Prostate and Neck of the Bladder.—Gonorrhœa in Women.—Gonorrhœal Ophthalmia—surprising Effects of strong Solutions of Nitrate of Silver as a Collyrium	77

LECTURE V.

Venercal Buboos, no certain diagnostic Characters before Ulceration to distinguish them from other Buboos.— Ricord's Experiments with the Matter of Bubo.— Treatment of Buboos.— Treatment of the constitutional Symptoms of the papular Venercal Disease.— Pains of the Joints from Gonorrhœa a secondary Symptom.— Treatment of Iritis; Bleedletting, Mercury, Turpentine.—Treatment of Pustular Venercal Disease.—Primary Symptoms—secondary Symptoms.—Antimony, Sarsaparilla, Iodine; the latter, and its Combinations, of great Utility.—Phagedenic Venercal Disease.—Treatment of primary Symptoms; Utility of powerful Escharotics.—Treatment of secondary Symptoms 109

LECTURE VI.

Phagedenic Ulcers of the Fauces—beneficial Effects of Cauterization with a strong mineral Acid.—Ulcers of the Nares—Application of Nitrate of Silver in Substance and in Solution.—Ulceration of the Larynx—Tracheotomy the most effectual Cure, and why.—The Scaly Venercal Disease, or true Syphilis—Mercury its appropriate Remedy, and why.—Action of Mercury on the System.—Mode of conducting a Mercurial Course.—Symptoms common to all Forms of Venercal, the Papular, perhaps, excepted, viz., soft Elevations on the Tongue—Clefts on the Tongue—small apthous Ulcers inside of the Cheeks and Lips—condylomatous Elevations of the Skin near the Anus—falling off of Hair and Nails 138

LECTURE VII.

Venercal Disease in new-born Infants.—Symptoms of—the Eruption always scaly—Mode of Prevention considered—Treatment.—Diseases arising from the Use of Mercury—1st. Mercurial Phagedæna; 2nd. Excessive Salivation; 3rd. Dropsy; 4th. Mercurial Erethismus; 5th. Mercurial Eczema.—Summary of the Symptoms and Stages of Venereal Diseases, for which the Mercurial Treatment is applicable.—Consideration how far Mercury is of Use in preventing Secondary Symptoms . 162

LECTURE VIII.

Diseases most liable to be confounded with Venereal.—
 1st. Scrofulous Affections of the Nose, Throat, and Bones; 2nd. The Sivvens of Scotland, and Radesyge of Norway; 3rd. The Button-scurvy of Ireland; 4th. The Yaws of the West Indies; 5th. The Glanders in the Human Species; 6th. Phlegmonous and Erysipelatous Inflammation of the Organs of Generation; 7th. Ulcus Erraticum of the Groins and Pubes; 8th. Herpes Preputialis.—Examination of Cases in Hospital, with Remarks upon each.—Mr. Carmichael's priority of Claims to the Merit of the anti-Mercurial Treatment proved by Reference to Dates 188

ADVERTISEMENT.

THE following Clinical Lectures of Mr. Carmichael on Venereal Diseases, were noted and published by me, in conjunction with his Lectures on other subjects, in the Medical Press for 1840. As this author's several works on those diseases are now out of print, I have obtained his permission to republish those Lectures, and he has himself taken the trouble of revising them.

With the exception of some trifling verbal alterations, they are substantially the same as those already inserted in the Medical Press. To illustrate them, however, in a manner the least expensive, I have added but one engraving, which exhibits a specimen of the six different forms of venereal eruptions most frequently met with; and this will, I trust, be found a most useful and important addition to those Lectures.
