PREFACE

THE following Sermons were preached in Westminster Abbey at various times during the past four years. They are not designed to expound any special system of Theology, though, of course, they presuppose one. Their object is mainly practical: yet their appeal is not to some limited province of man's being but to the whole man as one who thinks and wills and feels and is a denizen of two worlds. The Sermons are, for the most part, independent studies, and, this being so, the same thought occasionally recurs and sometimes in the same form.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY,
