Foreword.

73-46
“OF making many books there is no end,” says the preacher ; and that can be the only excuse for making this one, which, indeed, would be quite without excuse were the many excellent commentaries on the little book which bears the preacher’s name in our canon more familiar to the average Bible reader. The chapters which follow grew out of a series of sermons by the author, in the course of his regular pulpit ministrations when pastor of College Church, Gettysburg, Pa., and are based on the ground-plan of “The Quest of the Chief Good,” by Rev. Samuel Cox, D. D., the great English exegete. They are offered in this form in the hope that the great fundamental lessons inculcated by Ecclesiastes may be borne home upon some Bible readers who may not have lingered over this little book long enough to catch its profound significance.
