If the hypothesis here advanced is sustained, and a ceptacle, so named, be a nature-fact, then it must follow that no more of this hypothesis, or theory, as human knowledge, can be new than is the measure of the latest development of such ceptacle. For if Antecedent is having its Being in its own expression, where atom, protoplasm and ceptacle follow each other, in one evolution, in, what may be, one scientific-philosophical classification, then knowledge itself, which appears with human life in that evolution, is correlative of this ceptacle development, and any individual person has little relative importance in so large a movement.

It is believed the propositions, together with the definitions, are stated with sufficient clearness to indicate the principle involved. Therefore, the brief argument added must be taken only as the method of their application in the thoughts of the writer, and not as supposedly conclusive evidence either for or against their validity.
