" Ask God to give thee skill
In comfort's art —
That thou may'st consecrated be
And set apart
Unto a life of sympathy.
For heavy is the weight of ill
In every heart,
And comforters are needed much
Of Christ-like touch."

PREFACE

THIS little work is published in the hope that it will be a help and comfort in the home life.

It is composed of the simplest rules and remedies to be used in the care of the sick, and some general directions regarding the nourishment that should be given, more especially during convalescence, and always subject to the approval of the physician in charge of the case.

A few pages of simple recipes for invalid cooking — which for convenient reference have been grouped under the headings of the various diseases in which they will be found most useful — have been added, and as they have been tested by actual experience, it is believed that they will be found of real service.

There are many cases of slight illness where the services of a trained nurse are not required, and also many homes where that "expensive luxury" (as I have heard her called) is quite out of reach of the purse strings, and her place has to be supplied by the loving ministrations of mother, wife, or daughter.

It is for these home nurses that I have gathered together the suggestions and ideas in this little book, with the sincere hope that it will prove of real assistance to them in the care of the loved ones at home.
