EXTEMPORE PRAYER

Its Principles, Preparation and Practice

"No one reading the book will doubt the spiritual point of view of the author. He always puts the idea first."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

"This is a book which deserves study by all who have the responsibility of conducting public or social prayer. . . . The design of the writer is to aid in the preparation for this, both in heart and mind and expression, as being no less important for the non-liturgical churches than preparation for preaching."—The Outlook.

"Many sensible suggestions for cultivating the art of public prayer are to be found in this book. Particularly useful to the pastor and theological student is the analysis of the principles of spoken prayer and the treatment of the subject that ought to be included in it. . . . As aids to dignity and variety of expression Mr. Talling has collected at the end of his book a considerable number of prayers from ancient and modern sources, the reading of which will illustrate many of the principles previously laid down."—The Standard.

"We have never seen the subject so practically, and at the same time spiritually, treated. It presents a brief but complete survey of all the principles involved in prayer, both public and private."—Christian Observer.

Preface

THE germinal thought of this book was conceived during the preparation of an earlier volume on the office of Public Devotion.<sup>1</sup> While "Extempore Prayer" was expressly designed to aid theological students and ministers in the discharge of a serious public office, the present work deals with communion as a private experience, and appeals to all classes who desire to understand God's contact with mankind.

As the term inter-communion is intended to signify more than is commonly supposed to be connoted by the word prayer, and involves an exercise of the soul not sufficiently cultivated, the reader is invited to become an explorer seeking deeper insight into his own experience, while investigating the operation of spiritual laws. Every thinker engaged—in science, in economics, in philosophy, in education—is endeavouring to extend the limits of his especial domain. The religious man alone does not regard himself as an investigator, yet the widest and highest and most important field in the realms of knowledge and power awaits exploration in the spiritual sphere.

The language of the present treatment was de-
