INTRODUCTION

A true life is far greater than we know, and sublimer than we think. To the ordinary conception, it is made up only of struggle, care and pain. But a deeper view reveals a royal opportunity for the expression of love and devotion.

Struggle and toil and ambitions are only Love writ large. Because at the root, all effort is the desire to bless, and to crown life with the dignity to which it is entitled.

We trust this faint limning of another life will add a new example of achievement, and mayhap incite another to exclaim

"Thou canst not fail Except thou yield."

"The mere tradition of a great ancestry has sometimes helped visibly to mould the characters of men who were intrinsically strong enough to stand alone. Reveries about historic birth and the teaching about historic foregoers have frequently given color to a lifetime, even when the man who has indulged in them bore Nature's own stamp that he was one of the chosen few who are to hand down greatness rather than derive it."
