IN THE

Library of Princeton University

PRINCETON N. J.

1901

This pamphlet is in no sense a full exposition of the classification of this library. The system, which contains some ten thousand subdivisions, will possibly be published in full later. The present purpose is to give a brief survey of the collections which make up the library and the main classes of their subdivisions, together with their location and some brief explanation of certain points of the method of the system. It is a condensed guide to the shelves for professors and students, answering the few questions which are oftenest raised.
