FIVE SHORT RELIGIO-SECULAR SUNDAY EVENING LECTURES DELIVERED FROM THE PULPIT OF THE FIRST CHRISTIAN CHURCH, EMPORIA, KAN., IN THE SUMMER OF 1889

BY

GEO. F. HALL.

"There ought to be a system of manners in every nation which a well formed mind would be disposed to relish. To make us love our country, our country ought to be lovely."—BURKE, Reflections of the French Revolution."

SECOND EDITION—5,000 COPIES.

CHICAGO:
COLUMBIAN BOOK COMPANY,
1893.

DEDICATION.

To whom more kind and appreciative could the author inscribe this little work than to his FATHER? A humble man, a loyal citizen, a faithful friend, a noble Christian—long, long may he live, a blessing to his children, an example to his neighbors, an honor to his country. May his declining years be freighted with the Saviour's tenderest gifts.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions and activities. It emphasizes that proper record-keeping is essential for transparency and accountability, particularly in financial matters. The text notes that without clear records, it becomes difficult to track expenses, revenues, and other critical data points.

2. The second section addresses the challenges associated with data management and storage. It highlights the need for secure and scalable solutions to handle large volumes of information. The document suggests that investing in robust IT infrastructure can help mitigate risks related to data loss and unauthorized access. Additionally, it stresses the importance of regular backups and disaster recovery plans.

3. The third part of the document focuses on the role of technology in streamlining operations. It describes how automation and digital tools can significantly reduce manual errors and improve efficiency. The text provides examples of various software applications used in business processes, such as CRM systems for customer relationship management and ERP systems for enterprise resource planning.

4. The fourth section discusses the importance of staying updated with industry trends and regulations. It notes that the business environment is constantly evolving, and organizations must adapt to new challenges and opportunities. The document recommends regular training and development for employees to ensure they have the necessary skills to thrive in a dynamic market.

5. The final part of the document concludes by summarizing the key points discussed. It reiterates that a combination of strong record-keeping, secure data management, efficient technology use, and continuous learning is essential for long-term success. The text encourages organizations to embrace these practices to stay competitive and resilient in the face of uncertainty.

INTRODUCTORY.

'My country, 'tis of thee,
Sweet land of liberty,
Of thee I sing:
Land where my fathers died,
Land of the pilgrim's pride,
From every mountain side,
Let freedom ring!

—SAMUEL F. SMITH.

AMERICA is to-day the king of nations. Though youngest among the giants of earth, our nation is the most intelligent, the most wealthy, and, consequently, the most powerful of all. Herein lies our danger. The great nations of antiquity did not decline and fall while ignorant, poor, and weak, but after they had attained to mightiness, and in that mightiness waxed corrupt. History repeats itself. To the student of the times no fact is more patent than that America is rapidly becoming America's worst enemy.

It is desired in these five short lectures to point out a few of America's evils, and to propose what shall seem to be the most certain and speedy remedy for each. The author does not pretend to be exhaustive, but simply suggestive. He aims at an agitation. If he shall succeed in arousing one thoughtful mind to an appreciative sense of the awful dangers threatening our national fabric, his work shall not have been in vain.

What a glorious land is ours! What a noble government! One feels like quoting the words of Byron in "Childe Harold:"

"Oh, Christ! it is a goodly sight to see
What heaven hath done for this delicious land."

God forbid that we should take one backward step! There is too much at stake. We must not falter in the path of duty. We must eradicate these growing evils. Oh, America--

"Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee, are all with thee."

—LONGFELLOW.

In the preparation of these lectures the author has consulted various authorities. Among the most helpful were "Our country," by Dr. Josiah Strong, and "Isms, New and Old," by Dr. Geo. C. Lorimer. From these, and other valuable works, much has been "absorbed." In many instances due credit is given for borrowed facts, but not in all. Should an author attempt to give credit for everything borrowed his book would be little better than a cyclopædia of references. It is believed that the average reader in this day and age wants results, not processes. Here are some of the results of a conscientious study of the questions before us. May each reader rise from the perusal of these pages, as the author rises from their preparation, with that earnest petition expressed in a hymn by Dwight:

"God bless our native land!
Firm may she ever stand
Through storm and night;
When the wild tempests rave,
Ruler of wind and wave,
Do thou our country save
By thy great might.
