MOTHER NATURE'S WORKSHOP.

By GRACE GOODRIDGE.

Teddy had never been in so strange a place before. He didn't just know how he happened to be there now, but he didn't care much, it was all so nice and pleasant. Just then he spied a little old woman — such a funny little old woman — bending over a table and working away at tiny scraps of gray fur.

- "How do you do?" said Teddy.
- "Oh, how do you do?" answered the old woman, looking up.
 - "Are you surprised to see me?"
- "Not a bit of it," said the old woman, laughing. "Not nearly so surprised as you are to be here. I saw you coming."
