A REMEMBRANCE OF DRACHENFELS.

I.

WHEN in a quiet time
We lift our oars, and glide upon the stream
Of life, and seem
To hear again the faint and distant chime
Of joy-bells long ago,
Whose voices once had power to charm us so,
Fond Memory may build
Her visions bright that mirror perished years,
And we are filled
With joy serene akin to tears.

II.

Then do we gather back
The thoughts and feelings of the happier hour:
Such wondrous power
Hath that enchantress from the floating rack
