CONTENTS.

CHAPTER I.

THE JOY OF THE MINISTRY.

	PAGE
Country work—External pleasantness—Air, exercise, each day's "walking tour"—Varying views—Interesting scenes—Cheering welcomes—Happy spiritual efforts—City work—The "wealth of souls"—Each street linked with happy memories—Valued friends—Public preaching—Winning souls—Human sympathy often—Christ's sympathy always—The crown of glory	1

CHAPTER II.

PERSONAL QUALIFICATIONS FOR THE MINISTRY— FAITH.

Nature of pastoral office—Intellectual faith—Doubts and perplexities: how far they unfit for the office, how far they may cling to the earnest believer—Morbid doubts and healthy questionings—Mind inquiring, horizon widening, mental perspective changing—Great lines of truth unalterable—Heart-faith—Varieties in religious history, one essential, individual communion with Christ—Secret of unction in teaching and preaching—Spiritual exercise needed to keep faith fresh—Religious dangers in religious work—Safeguard in the secret Presence	14
--	----

CHAPTER III.

PERSONAL QUALIFICATIONS FOR THE MINISTRY—
THE LOVING SPIRIT.

	PAGE
Delicacy of pastoral work—Heart-secrets—Close intimacy— Sacred sorrows—Only love gives needful delicacy of heart —“Faithful,” but hateful clergyman—Clerical mannerism —Difficulties in loving—Uninteresting parishioners— Helps in loving—Feeling ourselves sent to our people —Thought of their infinite destiny—St. Paul’s example— Thought of the Saviour’s love—Loving actions—Prayer for love—Prayer for the people	28

CHAPTER IV.

THE WARRIOR SPIRIT.

Apparent quietness, real battle of clerical life—Each day’s work a campaign—The pastor a leader—Reproof and rebuke— Plain speaking—Independence—Misery of vacillation— Clearness and decision in public—Holy boldness in per- sonal intercourse—Temptations to shrink from difficult duties—Desire to please rather than to profit—Dread of awkwardness and unpleasantness—Cultivation of soldier spirit—Instinctive obedience to duty—Caution against bluster and swagger—Troublesome valorousness of weak man—Difference between boldness and hardness—Bold- ness strengthened, yet softened, by love	41
---	----

CHAPTER V.

THE LABOURER.

Temptations to indolence in pastoral work—Facility of giving mock work—Easy-going popular clergymen—Need of self-examination—Confession of indolence to the Master —Work should be reasonable—Fuss and hurry hinder usefulness—Quality of work more important than quantity —Method and order—Conscientious forethought— Arrangement of time—Due proportion to various branches of work—Parish books and statistics—Programme of each day’s work—System careful, but elastic; to help, not to bind	50
---	----

CHAPTER VI.

HINTS FOR THE STUDY.

	PAGE
Study a branch of parochial work, not a rival to it—Special dangers of cultured members of our flocks—The uncultured clergyman's difficulties in helping them—Simplicity of speech and mental cultivation—Imperfect education and tawdry rhetoric—Division of labour between study and parish—Subjects of our reading:—I. Holy Scripture—Thoughtful study of it—Search for God's teaching to the heart—The frame and the picture—Danger of mere "text-theology"—Mind attuned to Divine teaching—Study for others—Study for ourselves—Sacred seasons for listening to the Divine voice.—II. Evidences of religion—Difficulties of modern thought—Means of helping.—III. Dogmatic theology—God's Revelation and man's thoughts—Sympathy with human difficulties, mistakes, and struggles.—IV. Ecclesiastical history—History of Christian thought—Unity and continuity of Christ's Church—Study of Church history counteracts "parochialism."—V. Mental and moral philosophy.—VI. Natural science—Investigation of facts—Gives calmness of thought—Counteracts bigotry, dogmatism, intolerance.—VII. General literature—Relaxation—Culture of mind—Facilitates utterance—Sympathy with the brotherhood of humanity—Caution—"One thing needful"—Danger of literary ostentation—Unity in varied studies through spiritual aims.—VIII. Advantage of having always one solid book on hand	63

CHAPTER VII.

ON THE KNEES.

Prayer the link between outdoor and indoor work—Human powerlessness to change human hearts—Faith in the reality of prayer—Involved in the reality of God—Praying to keep pace with working—Prayer for each person spoken to—The "House of Prayer"—Services of the Church—Sacraments of the Lord Jesus—Notes in sanctuary ministration, reverence, love, joy	94
---	----
